Short Description

There is a general agreement that the creation, success, longevity, and survival of SMEs are deeply linked to the effectiveness of decision-making processes. Entrepreneurial decisions are affected both internally, at the individual level of the entrepreneur's cognition, emotions, and ambition, as well as externally, due to the continuous negotiation with different stakeholders. The impact of these decisions' characteristics and their relation to those of other actors is a fundamental topic to be investigated by entrepreneurship scholars. For this reason, the track welcomes novel research approaches that are conceptual or empirical.

Long Description

Entrepreneurs, compared to non-entrepreneurs, face conditions of high uncertainty, ambiguity and time pressure and are more under emotional intensity and high risk when making decisions. Similar conditions apply when entrepreneurs negotiate with their internal and external stakeholders.

There is a broad agreement that decision-making is affected by cognitive aspects, rationality and intuition (Sadler-Smith, 2004), as well as by emotions and passion (Cardon, 2012). Moreover, as a successful answer to today's business environment, it is also important to understand how entrepreneurs deal with and negotiate the relationships with other stakeholders (Ribeiro-Soriano and Urbano, 2009).

A growing body of literature also emphasizes that some entrepreneurs have higher ambitions than others, i.e., they identify and exploit opportunities to create new products, services, processes, or organizations with higher entrepreneurial intensity. The interest in this type of entrepreneurship is related to the observation that entrepreneurial value generation beyond mere self-sufficiency is critical for a society's economic growth and progress. Empirical studies have shown that growth intentions are important predictors of subsequent firm growth (e.g., Davidsson et al., 2006) and that ambitious entrepreneurship contributes more strongly to macroeconomic growth than entrepreneurial activity in general (Stam et al., 2011).

The track welcomes multidisciplinary investigations that are theoretical, conceptual, qualitative or quantitative. The track is composed of four sub-topics (please clearly indicate the chosen sub-track directly in the manuscript under the title); we propose (but do not limit) particular subjects for each:

Subtrack 1: Entrepreneurial Emotions, Passion and Trust:

- What are the impacts of emotional aspects and passion on the success of the enterprise?

- What is the role of emotions, trust and fairness in entrepreneurial decision-making?
- How is passion experienced, displayed, and perceived?
- The dynamic aspects of passion, emotions and behaviours.
- Studies about entrepreneurial failures, learning/sense-making processes, and the negative consequences or drivers of passion.

Subtrack 2: Entrepreneurial Cognition:

- What are the underlying cognitive mechanisms of entrepreneurial decisions?
- What are the impacts and effectiveness of entrepreneurial decision-making?
- Understanding the duality of cognitive mechanisms (rationality and intuition).
- How do entrepreneurial cognitive aspects influence (and how are they influenced by) the industry or environmental context in which the firm is embedded?
- The entrepreneur as a quasi-rational decision-maker (Dhimi & Thomson, 2012).

Subtrack 3: Ambitious Entrepreneurship:

- Comprehensive, complex and truly interdisciplinary models to understand ‘ambitious entrepreneurship,’ using novel conceptual and empirical approaches (e.g., papers relying on the latest developments of other disciplines, such as psychology and sociology). We specifically welcome papers focusing on the firm and individual level, rather than the country level.
- Relations of ambitious entrepreneurship with other domains of society (government, NGOs, the non-profit sector).
- Studies of ambitious entrepreneurship across different cultural and institutional contexts.

Subtrack 4: Entrepreneurship, Negotiation and Conflict Management:

- What are the links between entrepreneurship and negotiation?
- What is the role of negotiation and conflict management in fostering creativity and innovation?
- Conflict management and negotiation styles in SMEs, family businesses, and start-ups.
- The role of technology in decision making and negotiation support systems.
- How is intergenerational succession negotiated, and how are intergenerational conflicts managed?
